Celebrating Black American History, Culture in Greenbelt

by Lois Rosado

Many wonderful programs have been presented so far this month to educate and celebrate the cultural and historic contributions of Black Americans in building our society and country. Black American artifacts were on display on February 6 through Regina's Popup Museum. Regina Small, a resident of Greenbelt, graciously shared her collection with city residents. Due to the Community Center staff efforts in creating a clean and safe environment, many participants were able to come out and view this wonderful, interesting collection in person.

On Sunday, February 7, Creative Arts Director Nicole DeWald arranged for an Artful Afternoon that included puppet and quilt crafts as well as puppet shows. Dirk and Azaria

An aerial view of the Co-op roof emphasizes that every inch is working hard to power the store.

The Greenbelt Co-op Supermarket and Pharmacy energized its newly installed 241.6-kilowatt rooftop solar project on Tuesday, February 9. Completed in December, the array had to pass inspection by the county and be energized by Pepco before switching to its operational mode.

"I'm so delighted that the Co-op will be powered by clean energy through this project, and am so grateful to our dozens of Co-op members and community members who invested and donated money to make it a

Covid Vaccine Sign-up Woes, Hints; Offer Help for Others

by Cathie Meetre

Obtaining a vaccination slot is tough for the computer averse. Greenbelters who don't belong to an organized health care provider like an HMO must get their shots by hook or by crook. A letter on Saturday, February 13 from County Executive Angela Alsobrooks promises that restructuring is underway but meanwhile the county remains last in the state, far behind other local jurisdictions, in percentage of population vaccinated (Prince George's: 5 percent, Montgomery: 10 percent, Kent: 20 percent, Baltimore City: 10 percent). County bulletins are available at princegeorgescountymd.gov/2401/News-Center.

In the following stories, names have been changed but the events are real.

City Council Hears Initial Report On Deficiencies in Maglev DEIS

by Matthew Arbach

Jill Grant and Associates, a law firm hired by the city, met with the city council on Wednesday, February 10 to share their evaluation of the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) issued by SCMaglev on January 15. Grant said they were asked to "point out flaws" and ascertain if all proper steps and contingencies had been addressed. Their goal in the meeting was to get direction from council on what issues to explore further and whether experts should be brought in to enhance arguments.

At present, the comment period on the DEIS ends on April 22. In the event of any court appeal to the project, if it moves into a final EIS stage, all issues must be raised by the city, or other involved parties, by that time to be allowed into any kind of an argument.

The firm's outline to council touches on a large number of topics. It points out a deficiency in considering the full scope of the project, as it would eventually extend to New York. They found a lack in considering other alternatives, such as enhancing existing rail systems like Amtrak or MARC as well as "inaccurate financial assumptions and inaccurate traffic data" as a basis for the project's need. Other types of technology were not explored, such as Chinese maglev technology.

There was a "failure to address all water quality impacts," including stormwater, groundwater, wetlands and requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act. The firm

Greenbelt Recreation Hosts Virtual Drummers Master Class

by Glory Akem Ngwe

"Bass, bass, bass. One at a time."

The rhythmic sound of drums belted through the computer speakers as an intimate crowd of five gathered over Zoom to learn the basics of West African drumming.

Greenbelt Recreation hosted an African drummers master class Saturday as part of the city's line-up of Black History Month events.

The class was taught by Michael Kweku Owusu, an artist and craftsman from Accra, Ghana. He wore a shirt with a West African print and was accompanied by his instrument.

"Try and raise your hand more when you play," Kweku instructed as he lightly tapped the Djembe traditional drum between his legs. "The drum should be tilted away from you."

For the class, Kweku taught participants a traditional piece of music called Kuku which is commonly played in West Africa during the fishing harvest.

"Boom, boom, boom. Hit the center of your drum with your palm," Kweku said. "Once you understand the basics, you can play the Djembe."

Kweku spent over 10 years studying traditional West African drumming, building drums and working closely with poverty-stricken children in the Ghana Arts Center.

He founded Drumming Up From Poverty, whose purpose is to support, polish and share the talents of artists and craftspeople. Kweku teaches many classes internationally and said he loves

Thanks for HB704 Dear Delegate Ivey,

Thank you for co-sponsoring HB704, to help save our forest preserve.

I have lived in historic old Greenbelt for over 40 years.

Without the “belt of green” we would not be who we are. It was an integral part of the original planned community and there is precious little left. Without the actions 20 years ago of our citizens and our city government to preserve it from development, even those remaining 100 acres would be gone.

If the maglev is built, not only would over 15 acres, 15 percent of our important historic preserve, be destroyed, but the entire preserve would become little more than a buffer for an emerging underground and elevated train track system.

Adjoining baseball, soccer fields and our astronomical observatory would be lost as well.

Moreover, it would be an elevated train track that does not serve the people. It serves just the egos of a few misguided politicians, lines the pockets of developers, creates over 10 years of expensive disruption and problems, and should not be built, period.

The money would be better spent upgrading Amtrak and Metro.

Planting trees rather than cutting them down would be another better use. You could even name it the Larry Hogan Forest Preserve system.

Thank you for reading my letter.

Our Readers Tell Us of Their U.S. Postal Service Problems

Two readers responded to our request for U.S. Mail-related problem stories:

On December 20, 2020, Cross-roads Prison Ministries mailed a prisoner’s lesson to me, a mentor. Usually, it takes six days for a lesson to reach me after it is mailed from Grand Rapids, Mich. For unknown reasons, the lesson didn’t arrive at my Greenbelt address until February 10, 2021, a span of over seven weeks.

Jim Gray

My husband and I live on Lakeside Drive. We have been having problems with mail delivery for more than a year. We have not gotten bills and have had to go online or the telephone to find payment information. Many days we get no mail at all. Some companies send us a notice of a missed payment, but some do not. A package I ordered through Amazon, but assigned to USPS delivery, came six weeks late and was rerouted all over the country for six weeks. Our latest experience is a card written to our granddaughter who is in college in Salisbury. It was mailed on January 9. It arrived at her dorm on February 10. It is a good thing it was a card and not homemade baked goods.

City Notes

Besides shoveling snow, Horticulture/Parks repaired many things: broken hand sanitizers, wooden benches, post caps and a trash can. Street Maintenance/Special Details maintained snow plows and repaired potholes. Refuse/Recycling collected 26.18 tons of refuse and 12.57 tons of recyclables. Building Maintenance installed temporary phone lines for fire alarms at Springhill Lake Recreation Center.

Animal Control investigated a fatal dog-on-dog attack. Shelter residents are three cats and three dogs. Park rangers posted about weather-related trail hazards.

Greenbelt Homes Inc. installed a new front door at the Museum and staff researched a university inquiry about sculptor Lenore Thomas Straus. Black History Month daily posts featured Black architect Paul R. Williams.

Winter recreation continues. Black History Month events included an African Drummers Class and a Poetry Slam. Preschoolers learned about Mae Jemison, the first African American woman space explorer.

At the Community Center, Therapeutic Recreation hosted a blood drive, facilitated food deliveries for 37 seniors and hosted Ageless Grace for Golden Agers.

Talk on Hidden Figures Behind Space Software

On Thursday, February 25, the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt will present a virtual lecture by Kenneth Costello of NASA's Katherine Johnson IV&V Facility, who will explain how today's "hidden figures" ensure the quality of the software that runs the space program. Zoom session opens at 7 p.m. The presentation starts at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome. Zoom information will be posted before the meeting starts on the Astronomical Society website, greenbeltastro.org.

Reduce Stress With Yoga Nidra

On Monday, February 22 at 7 p.m., Greenbelters can experience Yoga Nidra, a powerful meditation technique, through an evening event sponsored by the group Connecting Across Greenbelt. Laura Bonkosky, a local yoga teacher trained in the iRest method, will guide participants through a series of steps designed to encourage relaxation and awareness.

Yoga Nidra is one of the easiest yoga practices to develop and maintain. No special equipment or experience in meditation is needed. Yoga Nidra is traditionally practiced lying on a mat or blanket on the floor, using additional blankets and pillows as needed, but it can be practiced in any comfortable position, including seated in a chair.

Yoga Nidra promotes deep rest and relaxation while still remaining conscious or awake. It has been shown to be a gentle but effective way to reduce anxiety and stress.

Connecting Across Greenbelt is a local organization working to enhance the quality of life for all residents of Greenbelt through convening a series of cross-community, cross-cultural and cross-generational conversations. To join this free virtual event, go to us02web.zoom.us/j/84271802553?pwd=aWhuVG9jeGh6eWV3TlR2a1ZjQXMwUT09.

Zoom Meeting For Gardeners

On Sunday, February 28, at 7 p.m. Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll, the city's environmental coordinator, will speak about native and invasive plant species. The program will discuss these plants' impact on the environment and how to get involved, in one's yard or beyond. This program is geared toward both experienced gardeners and outdoors folks, who may want to share some experiences with curious beginners. Winter is a great time to remove invasive species. Questions and suggestions from participants are welcome and encouraged.

This environmental Zoom series is sponsored by the Green Teams of Greenbelt Community Church, UCC and the City of Greenbelt.

RSVP to Jane Young at gccjane@aol.com for Zoom information. Give a username as it will appear in Zoom, or a phone number if calling in.

Racial Equity In Greenbelt

The Greenbelt Racial Equity Alliance invites white Greenbelters to participate in a free, interactive, three-part workshop on Saturdays, February 20, March 6 and March 20 from 1:30 to 4 p.m. that covers how racism and white supremacy function, their foundation in the United States and the role of white people in building racial justice and supporting liberation movements led by Black, Indigenous and other Peoples of Color (BIPOC). As a way of understanding how racism operates, discussion will focus on Greenbelt's history of housing discrimination and the ways it impacts our community today. ## Democratic Club Hosts Black History Event

The Eleanor & Franklin Roosevelt Democratic Club's Black History Month event will take place Sunday, February 28 at 3 p.m. The Zoom link will be included in next week's issue of the News Review. The Club will hold a black history quiz, a history lesson on Black Women and a discussion of the 2015 film Drive While Black starring Dominique Purdy, Sheila Tejada and John Mead. (The film is available on YouTube.) The Club recommends readers view the film over the next couple of weeks so as to contribute more readily and listen more meaningfully to the main points expressed by others.

The Club feels that this would be a great way for Greenbelters to conclude what has been an impressive range of Black history lessons provided by the City Recreation Department, Greenbelt Access Television, the Prince George's County Memorial Library System, the Greenbelt Museum and the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee.

PGCS Holds Town Hall On Reopening Plans

Prince George's County Public Schools CEO Monica Goldson will hold a Telephone Town Hall to discuss school reopening plans with families and community members on Thursday, February 18 at 6 p.m. Parents and guardians will receive a direct call from the school system. Those who do not receive a call can dial in at 855-756-7520, ext. 71961#. The Spanish-only call-in number is 508-924-5155.

On Thursday, April 8, Phase 1 instruction will begin with a two-day hybrid learning schedule for all special education students in kindergarten through 12th grade and for students in prekindergarten through 6th grade and 12th grade. On Thursday, April 15, Phase 2 instruction will begin for all remaining students. The hybrid learning model will include staggered scheduling, with students divided into two groups for in-person instruction for two days each week, with appropriate social distancing; the remaining three days will be spent in distance learning.

PGCS will distribute a survey to all families so they can select to either continue virtual learning for the remainder of the school year or begin hybrid instruction two days a week in April. Families will have until Sunday, February 28 to complete the survey.

Elizabeth Pels Nash: A Greenbelt Pioneer

Elizabeth (Liz) Pels Nash

Pioneer Greenbelter Elizabeth Ann (Liz) Pels Nash died February 3, 2021, at the age of 81. She was born July 9, 1939, in Washington, D.C., to Teresa and Siegfried (“Doc”) Pels. In September of 1940 the family moved from their apartment on Parkway to 23-C Ridge Road, which became Liz’s lifelong home. The Bill and Mattie Siegel family lived next door, and their daughter Carole became Liz’s friend for life. In 1944, Liz’s brother Philip was born.

Growing up in Greenbelt, Liz took swimming lessons at the pool and piano and dancing lessons. She played clarinet in the town band and joined the Girl Scouts. She and Philip became carriers for the Greenbelt Co-operator (the town newspaper’s name back then). As she grew older, she became an assistant leader in the Scouts and took her “girls” on trips. She especially remembered their visit to the 1964 World’s Fair in New York City.

Liz attended elementary school at Holy Redeemer in College Park and went on to high school at St. Patrick’s Academy in Washington. She joined the Sodality of Our Lady of St. Hugh parish, founded in 1947, and was active in the CYO (Catholic Youth Organization). She became a CYO Adult Advisor and was a member of St. Hugh Young Adult Club. She graduated from the University of Maryland in 1961.

Liz worked for 27 years at the Federal Trade Commission in Washington, retiring in 1988. It was there that she first met Charles Nash, a widower and World War II veteran, 15 years her senior. They were married in 1990. Charlie immediately became a Greenbelter, changing his American Legion enrollment to join Post 136. Liz joined the Ladies Auxiliary, and both of them helped at all the activities and fundraisers at the Legion Post. They also enjoyed several vacations at the Cape Cod cottage Liz had bought, near her mother’s Worcester relatives. Charlie died in 2005.

Liz was extremely proud of her status as a pioneer Greenbelter. In spite of increasing medical problems which caused her to rely on her old Greenbelt and work friends for transportation and other help, she always supported the Greenbelt Museum, the News Review and all the town organizations. She was so thankful that she and Philip were able to attend the 2012 Gala celebrating Greenbelt’s 75th anniversary, and also the News Review’s anniversary banquet that same year. She announced to all that she believed that she and Philip had been the only “sister and brother” carriers for the paper. Philip died early the next year, in February 2013.

One of Liz’s favorite Greenbelt events was the annual Labor Day celebration. On the Sunday night of the weekend, she would dress in her Greenbelt is Great T-shirt and spend hours at the photo exhibit and then the Bingo tables. She liked to sample foods from many different booths and stay at Bingo until the final game was played. In recent years, as her health declined, she spent more and more time in assisted living, moving eventually to Arbor Ridge. Last year, she reluctantly sold her beloved Greenbelt home.

Liz is survived by her godchildren Vernon Payne III and Lisa Payne Doheney and by many friends who helped her throughout her life, especially LaVerne and Vernon Payne, Carole Sie-gel, Dick Wadden, Paula Windsor, Kathleen McFarland, Milton Greenbaum, Ron Lewis, Rand Price, Eleanor Knowles and staff and friends at Arbor Ridge.

A funeral Mass will be held at St. Hugh of Grenoble Church on Tuesday, February 23 at 11 a.m., with burial at Gate of Heaven Cemetery following. Those who wish to remember Liz might consider a contribution to the Arts Program of the New Deal Café created by the late Barbara McGee Simon, who was one of her Girl Scouts, or to the Greenbelt Museum or the Greenbelt News Review.

Craig Thomas Wilson, Jr.

On the morning of February 11, 2021, Craig Thomas Wilson, Jr., age 35, died in a tragic car accident.

Craig was born on April 8, 1985, in Cheverly, to Craig Wilson, Sr. and Donna Silver. Craig Jr. was a resident of Hyattsville and attended Eleanor Roosevelt High School, spending a lot of time in Greenbelt. Most recently he lived in Malabar, Fla., where he was working at his father’s company, Palm Bay Concrete. Craig took great pride in his career as a truck driver. In his spare time, he enjoyed working on cars, playing pool, listening to good music and watching D.C. sports – especially his beloved Redskins.

He will be remembered for his kindness, love of life and heart of gold. He was a bright light to all who knew him. His loyalty and his devotion to his fiancée, friends and family were second to none. Craig was incredibly compassionate, and without hesitation would do absolutely anything for anyone that he loved.

At times Craig could seem a bit quiet and reserved, but it never took long for his larger-than-life personality to come out. He had a great sense of humor, contagious laugh and was always down for anything. Craig loved to have a good time, and it was always a good time when you were with him.

Craig had recently proposed to his love, Candyce Naomi Herd, and they were engaged on December 25, 2020. He was incredibly excited and extremely proud to be starting their life together. He looked forward to becoming a devoted husband, and dedicated stepfather to Nilah Lavon Herd, as he loved them both dearly.

He was preceded in death by his grandparents Milo Sr. and

"Religious Freedom: Getting the Balance Right"

Guest Speaker Rob Boston, Americans United for Separation of Church and State; and Worship Associate Diana McFadden

Religious freedom has traditionally been interpreted as the right to worship, or not, as you see fit. But in recent years, the Supreme Court has embraced a theory of religious freedom that threatens to open the door to discrimination and harms against others, especially members of the LGBTQ community, followers of minority faiths and non-believers. This sermon will examine the historic interpretation of religious freedom and explore options for ensuring that this vital principle is used as a shield to protect individual rights and not a sword to lash out at others. introducing others to the traditional rhythms of his country.

“Okay, turn on your mics, let me hear you play one by one,” Kweku instructed. “Then we’ll play together.”

The class lasted an hour and was open to all ages. Participants were required to bring their own drums since it was virtual.

Lois Rosado, co-chair of the Greenbelt Black History and Culture Committee, said it was a great learning experience. Pam Hamlin, a local participant, agreed.

“I’ve always wanted to drum so this is definitely getting me back into it,” Hamlin said. “It was a great class and I learned a lot.”

Despite not having a drum, Rebekah Sutfin, Greenbelt’s therapeutic recreation supervisor, said she couldn’t stay still during the lesson.

“It’s hard when you do anything with sound because of the little Zoom delay but I was tapping on my table,” she said. “You can’t help but move your feet because of the beat, so it was amazing.”

Greenbelt Recreation has more Black history events scheduled through February.

Joseph, a father and daughter team showed how language arts can be taught through puppetry. Schroeder Cherry (of Maryland) exhibited a historical moment in the history of the Black American struggle for equality and social justice during his segment. The father and son team of Jeghetto, Tarin Pipkins (of North Carolina) and Anthony Michael Stokes (of Texas) focused on Afro-futurism. After their presentations, the puppeteers participated in a question-and-answer session with the audience. It was a well-received event.

Drum Class

A master drum class, led by Michael Kweku Owusu, was held on Saturday, February 13. Kweku is an artist and craftsman from Accra, Ghana. Kweku was attentive to each of the students and took the time to explain correct drum techniques. Participants were of all ages and ethnicities, and all had a great time. There were some participants who just watched the lesson. Everyone appreciated Kweku’s efforts to teach the basics and have fun in the process.

Poetry Slam

Prince George’s County students used poetry to express their pain about murders of unarmed Black children, youth, men and women at the hands of police, but also expressed hope for a better future where they are judged only by the content of their character and not by the color of their skins. Marissa Michel, Prince George’s County’s 2020 Youth Poet Laureate, shared her poetry filled with images of family and memories of her grandmother from Haiti. There was a question-and-answer session after the presentations and it was evident that the audience appreciated the talents of these students, many of whom indicated that they will continue writing as they grow and mature. Some planned to study film and theater arts in college. Neville Adams, a teacher and mentor of youth poets, joined in this presentation, as well as Patrick Washington who helped organize this session. In addition, Ric Gordon, a member of Greenbelt’s Black History and Culture Committee, enabled 268 folks to see this event live-streamed. Recreation Department staff aided with technical support and Robert Goldberg-Strassler (Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness) helped the committee connect to this group.

Coming Events

Stay tuned for more upcoming and exciting programs. This coming Saturday, February 20 from 2 to 3 p.m. Enslaved Life and Labor on Maryland Plantations will be presented followed by an audience question-and-answer session. On Sunday, February 21 from 2 to 3 p.m. Female RE-Enactors of Distinction (FREED) will give a live performance on forgotten American history. There will be a discussion with the performers after the program on Zoom.

The Greenbelt Museum will show an interview with one of the first African Americans to move into Greenbelt in Desegregating Greenbelt on Thursday, February 25 at 7 p.m.

On Saturday, February 27 from 3 to 4 p.m., there will be a belly dance class taught by certified instructors from Belly Dancers of Color. Wear comfortable clothing and tighten those muscles. Sit in a chair or stand. Just Zoom in and enjoy!

Lastly, a video of the Gospel Choir from Eleanor Roosevelt High School will be shown via YouTube on Sunday, February 28 at 2 p.m.

GATE Newsreel will feature Black American history facts. Each Wednesday, Greenbelt Recreation is featuring a prominent African American on their Facebook site.

This country was built with the contributions of many ethnic groups and individuals. A goal of the committee is to share American history not usually included in the history books about the nation. Enjoy and participate in learning.

Poetry Slam Expresses Feelings Of Youths, Connects Audience

by Haley Kerby

On Sunday, February 14, Prince George’s County Public Schools gave students the opportunity to share their feelings and pain at a Virtual Black History Month Poetry Slam. The event was hosted by mentors in Greenbelt, Rebekah Sutfin of the Greenbelt Recreation Department and residents Ric Gordon and Neville Adams.

The event showcased six students’ poetry, including Prince George’s County 2020 Youth Poet Laureate and published author, Marissa Michel, 16. Michel performed two show-stopping poems, one entitled Flowering Women which detailed her Haitian heritage as it connects to her family and life in America.

Michel, a resident of Bowie, is the youngest person to be honored with the Youth Poet Laureate award. When asked for her inspirations and themes for writing, Michel responded with much enthusiasm. Family, inter-generational relationships and a love for her culture and heritage is what allows Michel’s writing to prosper and uplift so many others.

Greenbelter Sainey Ceesay, the Prince George’s County 2021 Youth Poet Laureate, also performed two poems. Ceesay, 19, served as Greenbelt’s 2020 Youth Poet Ambassador and is an alumna of Eleanor Roosevelt High School who now studies at Prince George’s Community College.

Ceesay’s second piece, entitled Water, described the connections between the way African Americans are exposed to society in such negative ways and the everyday necessity that is water. She ended her poem by asking a question, “How is water the blackest thing you’ve ever seen?” This poem was incredibly moving, leaving much of the audience speechless and wanting more.

When asked about influences on her writing, Ceesay explained how her writing documents her struggles, allows her to speak to the issues that remain silent and puts power back into aiding these struggles. “My writing allows me to speak on things that aren’t talked about anymore ... and shows what it means to be a black person.”

The other students who performed were Deja Epps from Largo High School, Jorrin Ellison from Frederick Douglass High School, De’Aun Coleman from Hyattsville and Nathan Addai from Eleanor Roosevelt High School.

Gordon congratulated these poets toward the end of the slam, saying, “What we’ve seen today is true black excellence ... you’ve made your ancestors proud.”

Exhibit of Black Artifacts
Opens City’s BHM Events

by Deanna Dawson

Regina's Black Artifacts Popup Museum is on display in the Community Center on Saturday, February 6.

The City of Greenbelt kicked off its celebration of Black History Month (BHM) on Saturday, February 6 with an exhibition of Regina’s Black Artifacts Popup Museum. The exhibit, which was set up on a line of tables in the Community Center gym, included a variety of artifacts representing Black history and accomplishments from slavery through the White House. There were figurines and photos of notable Blacks, and groupings of items featuring, among other things, Black inventors and inventions, Black books and magazines, voting rights and Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr, and historically Black colleges, universities, fraternities and sororities. A final section on the presidency of Barack Obama and the election of Vice President Kamala Harris was followed by a photo opportunity with life-size cutouts of Barack and Michele Obama.

The curator of the exhibit is Regina Small, a resident of Greenbelt East. She started her collection of artifacts in 2006, when she ran a reading program for children in grades K through 6 at Kettering Baptist Church. Each year Small did something special for a Black history event, bringing in storytellers, puppeteers or items from her growing collection. When she retired from the reading program and from her career as a systems engineer, she reached out to elementary schools in Prince George’s County and the District of Columbia. During the past two Februarys, Small and her husband made 19 school visits to show parts of the collection to students. She said that Black inventions and her Now and Then collection of familiar objects – irons, telephones, cameras, etc. – are the most popular items, but 5th- and 6th-graders are interested also in learning about the people depicted in figurines or photos. She has no additional showings scheduled at this time but plans to reach out to some other organizations once the health restrictions are lifted. Small would like to find a location where she could display her museum collection for a week or longer at a time, but for now “pop up it is,” she says.

The pop-up exhibit was the first public event held in the Community Center since it closed due to Covid-19 on March 13, 2020. Attendees were required to pre-register, with six 20-minute time slots available, each limited to nine people. Community Center staffers were on hand to conduct the now-standard health screening and to let each group of registrants into the building at the appointed time. Community Center Supervisor Di Quynn-Reno remarked, “The artifacts displayed were impressive, with many attendees stating they learned interesting history through Regina’s artifacts. We are grateful for Regina’s enthusiasm and willingness to share her exhibit and to the staff who worked the event to ensure a safe experience for everyone.”

A Review

Greenbelt Arts Center Plays
Tamer Tamed on YouTube

by Melissa Sites

Petruchio’s treatment of Kate makes The Taming of the Shrew a hard play to like, and this has been true all the way back to Shakespeare’s day when his contemporary, John Fletcher, wrote a sequel called The Tamer Tamed. In Fletcher’s play, poor Kate has already kicked the bucket, and now Petruchio is up to his old tricks with a new wife, Maria. Fletcher’s women fight back, resisting the patriarchal world order to end up victorious over Petruchio and those like him. The Tamer Tamed, directed by Liana Olear, is currently being presented on YouTube by the Rude Mechanicals in residence at Greenbelt Arts Center.

There are three main women in this new play: Maria (Melissa Schick), who is already married to Petruchio (Wes Dennis) but not eager to consummate the marriage; Livia (Linda “Spencer” Dye), Maria’s younger sister; and Biancha, Kate’s sister, who urges the women to pursue their own happiness, played with a nice intensity by Pamela Northrup.

Wes Dennis as Petruchio brings a wild energy to his performance, familiar as the title character of The Revenger’s Tragedy earlier this season. Schick as Maria counters with a low-key and relaxed performance, consistently refusing to take Petruchio’s bait. Her ability to turn every ploy of Petruchio’s to her own advantage provides the backbone of the plot.

Livia’s machinations center on her attempts to wed her sweetheart Rowland (Sarah Pfanz), instead of Moroso (Bill Bodie). Pfanz delivers a fun, bouncy performance as the young, enthusiastic lover; Bodie portrays his character as desperate, lecherous, yet somewhat worn-out, and very poorly suited to Livia. The two characters, one lively and silly, one eponymously morose, make a fun contrast in this play, and the audience easily knows whom to root for. The cast is rounded out with great acting by Jim Adams as Sophocles, Nancy Linden as Petronius and Nathan Rosen as Tranio, characters who stand as “straight men,” representing the more conservative points of view in opposing the women’s desire to determine their own future. Sean Eustis also shines, bringing a light and clownish energy to the servant Jaques.

The Rude Mechanicals again did a really good job with the technology, manipulating the capabilities of Zoom to show one character at a time in a very unusual – and helpful – way. The action flows organically between characters as they speak, and the characters do not seem trapped in their boxes. Title cards between scenes, featuring punk songs mostly by women, help the viewer keep track of the plot. Backgrounds were well-chosen to show that the action of the play is more or less always in public, with Petruchio performing his masculinity as much for the other male citizens as for his new wife.

The Tamer Tamed will be live online via YouTube on Saturday, February 20, starting at 8 p.m. at youtube.com/c/TheRudeMechanicals. Suggested donations can be made via greenbeltartscenter.org, selecting Support Online Shows.

Council Discusses Possible FY-21 Budget Adjustments

by Diane Oberg

At its regular meeting on Monday, February 22 the Greenbelt City Council expects to decide upon what deferred expenditures it can restore to the current (Fiscal Year 21) budget and which positions can be unfrozen. The deferrals and partial hiring freeze were implemented last year in the face of the unknown impact of the coronavirus pandemic on city revenues and expenditures. Council and staff discussed these issues at the pre-budget worksession on February 3 and at its February 8 regular meeting.

Current Status

The agenda packet for February 8 (available online) contains City Treasurer Bertha Gaymon’s update of the city’s current budget situation. Gaymon made a few changes to the projections council reviewed in December. Based upon further review by Recreation Director Greg Varda, recreation revenues were revised resulting in a projected increase in city revenues of $119,301. Gaymon also added $216,000 to projected expenditures for legal fees related to maglev.

Gaymon’s $1.3 million reduction in the allowance for anticipated real estate abatements remained unchanged. At the December 28, 2020 worksession several of those in attendance questioned this reduction given that abatements can be made late in the assessment cycle and applied retroactively. There was no discussion of this issue at either the February 3 worksession or the February 8 council meeting.

On the expenditure side, Gaymon budgeted $216,000 for maglev-related legal fees and adjusted Miscellaneous expenditures by $54,267 for expenses related to Covid-19, some of which may be reimbursed. However, Director of Planning and Community Development Terri Hruby had received new information from the city’s environmental law firm, Jill Grant and Associates. The firm estimates it will need $90,000 per month for 3 months for the Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS), not counting the cost of any technical consultants needed. They currently expect to need at least four technical consultants.

This sum does not include costs related to the Environmental Impact Statement, which Councilmember Judith Davis reported that State officials say will be far more costly than the DEIS review. Nor does it include any costs related to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, proposed to be housed on the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center or the proposed Royal Farms gas station.

Other than these two changes, the projected expenditures in her spreadsheet are simply those in the adopted budget, pre-pandemic.

Altogether, she presented council with $1,383,200 in overall savings, nearly all reflecting the reduction in the allowance for future abatements. Gaymon plans to increase her projected legal expenditures to $300,000 in her next update.

Priorities

At the February 3 worksession, the councilmembers discussed their priorities related to these savings without reaching a consensus. They tried again at the February 8 regular meeting with various combinations being proposed until Councilmember Edward Putens moved to table the item to the next meeting so that Gaymon could put together a final proposal.

The major expenditures proposed by at least one councilmember:

- Restore employee COLA – estimated cost $275,000
- Employee Compensation Study - $75,000. Some council members believe the city’s compensation costs are too low and are making it difficult to hire and retain staff.
- Unfreeze the Assistant Director of Planning and Community Development position - $37,750 this year, $151,000 for next fiscal year.
- Unfreeze a full-time Animal Control Officer position - $16,000 this year, $64,000 next year.
- Unfreeze the Greenbelt Assistance in Living Mobility Coordinator - $8,000 this year, $32,000 next year.
- Transfer some amount to the city’s Emergency Fund. Councilmember Emmett Jordan proposed $50,000. Byrd proposed $87,750.
- Covid-19 Relief - Mayor Colin Byrd proposed spending the remainder of Gaymon’s savings for Covid-19 relief but did not yet have a specific proposal. It is also not yet known if there will be additional federal or state relief.
- Architectural Space Study – $30,000 – Jordan pressed for this saying with many staff working remotely it would be a good opportunity to make space changes.

Collecting Non-Perishable Food Items to Fight Hunger

by Jo-Anne Fournier

Once again, the Greenbelt Community Church, United Church of Christ (GCC) is participating in the Crop Walk and the Souper Bowl of Caring programs to fight hunger, under the leadership of Marty Folk and her many helpers.

The Souper Bowl of Caring, in its 30th year, is a youth-led program to fight hunger. The idea is to use some of the excitement of the Super Bowl to focus on hunger, by collecting non-perishable food items and donations to support local hunger programs.

Greenbelt Elementary School (GES) has been partnering with GCC on the Crop Walk and Souper Bowl of Caring for several years. For the last three years, teachers Mackenzie Peter and Tamia Perry, sponsors of the Greenbelt Student Government Association (SGA), have taken this program on as a project to support the community. Perry shared that, “when I heard about this opportunity, I was elated to continue to be a part of this act of kindness.”

How were they able to generate interest in this project with their students learning online? Perry said that “the students at GES look forward to this community service every year thanks to our wonderful SGA who broadcasts the information to our students over the announcements and by creating posters and flyers” about the Crop Walk and Souper Bowl. “The fact that students were not in the building might have made it difficult to collect non-perishables but a box was provided outside our school building for families to drop off canned food at any time throughout the day,” collecting 80-plus items of non-perishable foods that were taken to the Help by Phone Pantry. Perry added, “we are very happy to see the support of our Greenbelt families as canned food items were donated to the Crop Walk and Souper Bowl during this time. In school, students learn the importance of being a good citizen. Working with GCC is one way we can fulfill our roles as citizens and bring about change in our community.”

department. But no dice. With online assistance from a friend, she got a CVS appointment 60 miles away in Leonardtown where she received swift and courteous service.

Vladimir Vaxworthy – a 72-year-old computer geek with 1C priority – got onto the University of Maryland Medical System (UMMS) list on January 27 and was vaccinated at the UMMS Prince George’s Hospital in Cheverly on February 1. He feels guilty that higher-priority people remain unvaccinated but says he’d have been a fool to turn down the chance. With so many 1B requestors still without shots, it seems UMMS may not be prioritizing by age.

For Pippa Coronova, a healthy 1C in her late sixties, multiple forays to access pharmacy and the Six Flags sites were unsuccessful. Though her son saw openings at Six Flags around 7 a.m. one day, all were gone in less than half an hour. Update: Coronova finally got a late February appointment at the Greenbelt Safeway.

In perhaps the most telling vignette, a 93-year-old resident was told by her doctor to wait patiently for a shot. Despite being registered on a number of sites, she has not received an appointment – which somewhat contradicts the claims of prioritization. In fact, only sites that pre-register can prioritize. Sites like pharmacies and Six Flags schedule in real time – so there’s no way to choose the most deserving.

Strategies

The information included here is based only on anecdotal evidence. No guarantees are offered.

Web addresses for stores and hospitals are at coronavirus.maryland.gov – click on “Find a Vaccine.” Once a location and search radius are entered, the sites are listed with contact information – whether or not they have availability.

Any Maryland location can be used to search – it’s not necessary to stick to Greenbelt. County health departments accept only residents of their county but pharmacy and hospital sources are available to everyone (one Elliott City couple apparently got his and her shots in Ocean City and Frostburg, respectively).

Play to Win

This list covers only some of the possibilities. A Facebook page called “Maryland Vaccine Hunter” also offers suggestions.

– Register where possible. This includes (but may not be limited to) the Prince George’s County Health Department, UMMS, Luminis Health (which runs Doctors Hospital), Adventist Hospital and MedStar. If required to select only one location, consider signing up multiple times with a different location each time.

– Of the pharmacy sites, Giant tells you after requesting a few screens of information, that they have no appointments available so what would happen next is unknown.

– CVS has an “umbrella” gateway showing availability in Maryland and Virginia (the button to sign up is in the list box if there’s availability). If there’s a slot, use its location as the geographic search criterion. If the website registers an error, it’s likely too busy. Start over and keep trying until the “umbrella” summary shows no availability.

– Walgreens first requires establishment of an account, but then displays availability within 25 miles of a location without further questions when accessed.

– Six Flags appointments apparently appear early in the day and are rapidly snapped up.

Timing is a Factor

Sites add appointments for only a couple of days ahead because of uncertainty in the vaccine supply – likely early in the morning and stepping forward day by day. Consider setting the alarm for o-dark-thirty.

Volunteer to Help

Consider volunteering to help a vulnerable older person and be prepared for a siege. Vulnerable individuals may not advertise their plight, so ask around older friends. Family members helping older relatives in other ways may not realize how daunting this particular task is.

Facilitators need personal information for registration. Sites vary in their demands but birthdate, comorbidities, mother’s maiden name, Medicare or insurance numbers, home address and home and cell phone numbers may be required. Use the facilitator’s contact information to receive communications for those not electronically inclined – or emailed and time-sensitive sign-up links may be missed. A life may be saved.

Volunteers can offer to drive or help their friends find someone who can. Appointments may not be nearby and the recipient may be safer accompanied on a long drive home, in case of reactions.

found “problems with the analysis of impacts on various species and habitats,” especially regarding aquatic and forested areas and threatened species. They said that hazardous waste and construction spoils were insufficiently addressed as were air quality impacts, greenhouse gases and particulates. Threats to private property, due to proximity to construction as well as the project itself including tunneling, were not sufficiently explored.

They said the DEIS failed to take into consideration the cumulative effects that other related, large-scale projects would have, as well as “environmental justice implications” involving noise and vibration impacts, as well as possible gentrification. There was a deficiency in “compliance with the Land and Water Conservation Fund (LWCF) requirements,” stipulating approval by the National Park Service in the “conversion of lands purchased with LWCF assistance,” like the city’s Forest Preserve.

Safety analysis was lacking, in terms of passenger safety and electromagnetic radiation. Compliance with the National Historic Preservation Act was found wanting. There were “inadequacies in the Department of Transportation Act analysis.” The outline recommended a financial review of the project’s construction and operation costs, as well as the possibility of public subsidizing being

Dog-on-Dog Attack

A fatal dog attack occurred on February 9 at 8:48 p.m. at 5809 Cherrywood Lane, when an unleashed white-in-color pit bull approached a woman who was walking her dog. When she picked her dog up, the pit bull jumped up and bit her dog’s leg, fatally injuring it. The pit bull then ran from the area. The woman said she had seen the same dog earlier in the day with a juvenile male and two other dogs.

Assault

February 5, 10:08 a.m., 6000 Greenbelt Road. Officers responded to a report of a theft at the Perfume Center, where two men took a large quantity of perfume from the kiosk and then fled. Security officers found them at Greenbelt Liquors a short time later. One of the men pointed a handgun as the other returned some of the perfume before they both fled on foot. One of them wore red sneakers and a blue coat with white fur.

Theft

February 8, 6:52 p.m., 6000 block Greenbelt Road. A woman believed her credit card was taken from her purse at Laundroland Laundromat. It was used later to make unauthorized purchases.

February 8, 6:50 p.m., 438 Ridge Road. A package was removed from the front stoop of a residence on February 4.

February 9, 5:09 p.m., 7814 Hanover Parkway. A package was taken from the front stoop of a residence.

Vandalism

February 5, 8:20 p.m., 11 Crescent Road. A marker was used to vandalize a sidewalk.

February 7, 7:46 p.m., 5908 Cherrywood Terrace. A rock was used to break the bedroom window of a residence.

February 7, 12:58 p.m., 6006 Springhill Drive. A woman heard a noise in her residence and discovered that a brick had been thrown through the bedroom window. She looked outside and saw a person wearing a puffy black jacket running from the area.

Vehicle-related

A 2-year-old child was left alone in an unlocked 2018 Chevrolet Traverse on February 4 with the engine running in the 9200 block Springhill Lane, when an unknown person got in the vehicle and drove away. It was recovered a short time later in the 6200 block of Seminole Street in Berwyn Heights, with the child safe and inside the vehicle.

A man at 6019 Springhill Drive was helping a neighbor start his 2011 Jeep Compass, and left the door to his vehicle unlocked, with the engine running. A man got into the helper’s vehicle and drove away. The vehicle was recovered the next day by the Prince George’s County Police Department at an undisclosed location. Two arrests were made.

An attempted carjacking occurred at 7200 Hanover Drive but was foiled. The target was approached by four men who pushed him to the ground and demanded his car keys. The man refused, and they kicked him several times before they fled.

A successful carjacking occurred at 6011 Springhill Drive, when the driver was standing outside of his vehicle and a man with a handgun stuck in his waistband approached. He took the driver’s black 2010 Nissan Rogue with Maryland tags 6EF9151.

A case of arson is being investigated by the Prince George’s County Fire Department: A parked car at 8 Court Research Road was set on fire.

Multiple stolen vehicles were recovered: a 2004 Ford Mustang from Charlotte-Mecklenburg, N.C.; a black 2011 Hyundai Sonata; and a 2001 Chrysler Town and Country.

A catalytic converter and two handicap placards were taken from the 7700 block Hanover Parkway and 227 Lakeside Drive, respectively.

Nails were used to flatten all four tires on one vehicle in the 8900 block Edmonston Road.

Two windows at 7423 Greenbelt Road were broken.

A 1986 Ford F150 pickup was recovered on Crescent Road. It was reported stolen by the Frederick County Sheriff’s Department.

A 2020 Dodge Charger stolen from 7509 Mandan Road was recovered by the Prince George’s County Police Department in the 1800 block Billings Avenue in Capitol Heights. The tags on it, Maryland 16973CJ, were not recovered and are still out as stolen.

needed (which would require “an environmental effects report under the Maryland Environmental Policy Act.”)

Council felt all of these issues were pertinent and asked for all to be raised. Councilmember Judith Davis stressed that due to the lack of transparency in the disclosing of data, like finances, traffic impacts and ridership numbers, a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request may be necessary.

An overview of the two alignments being considered and the technology proposed was presented along with representations of what the system would actually look like, superimposed on the current landscape.

Davis reiterated council’s support of the no-build option, but said she would consider the alternative of improving Amtrak. Councilmember Leta Mach said she would consider an extension of Metro’s Green Line to Baltimore.

Council agreed that experts were necessary to make the best possible case and frame each issue correctly. Grant and her team presented a working list of experts in various fields. Council was open to the suggestions, yet also encouraged enlisting local expertise as well, some of which may be with no cost. Mayor Colin Byrd asked for a cost analysis first before a final decision could be made. Grant said that the city would be in a contractual relationship with each expert. Davis recommended creating a donation fund to help pay the costs. Grant said that the current use of experts would be for information gathering, not so much for fulfilling a role in a court setting.

Council was open to working closely with adjoining communities in this effort, perhaps cost-sharing in the use of experts and finding common areas of impact from the project.

Davis recommended more extensive use and collaboration with the Maryland Citizens for Responsible Transit and the SC Maglev Strategy Group, which have been doing considerable work in gathering data and connecting with the community on this matter. The city’s Maglev Task Force is still open for membership.

Resident Robert Snyder, once a proponent of the maglev, said that the pandemic has altered his stance, as it has become clear that former concepts of safe travel and the need for in-person meetings have changed, perhaps for the long term, making the maglev unnecessary.

Based on direction from council, Grant said that her team would coordinate with city planning staff, of which Community Planner Holly Simmons has been instrumental, on looking at the costs and availabilities of proposed experts. She said that two months would be a reasonable time frame to fully complete an analysis of the entirety of the issues raised and gather expert testimony.

Davis asserted the absolute necessity of countering the maglev, as it would kill “the heart of Greenbelt,” and be a “tragedy.” She cited Greenbelt’s history in fighting down “formidable” threats to the community.

Mach said that the maglev would “destroy our city,” that “if we don’t fight it, fight it as much as we can, we’re dead.”

Improved Surroundings Await The Return of Local Baseball

by Ian Gleason

The last official baseball game played at Braden Field was the 15U Babe Ruth State Final on July 13, 2019. Covid-19 has caused an upheaval to the typical calendar of youth baseball at Braden Field and other local fields. During that time, a variety of enhancements has improved the experience for future Greenbelt baseball players and fans. The changes include painting the storage shed and storage box at Braden Field #1, painting distance markers from home plate on three light poles in the outfield and planting a Yoshino cherry tree in honor of Kelly Ivy's service to the program.

The shed now sports bold geometric shapes featuring the team colors of green, gold and black, the team logo and a baseball, as well as an eye-catching paint splatter design on the side door.

Former player and local artist Wesley Velasquez designed the current logo and was the lead painter and designer for the shed. Eleanor Roosevelt High School (ERHS) graduate Maerielle Batugo did the designs for the storage box outside the entrance of the field. Batugo previously was one of the primary artists on the redesign of the dugouts at the ERHS baseball and softball fields.

The colors that now surround the field will be sure to brighten the venue when practices and games are finally able to resume at Braden Field, and the new cherry tree will provide beauty to the early spring practices and return of baseball season. Until it is safe for the return of a more normal calendar, the green, gold and black will have to catch the eye of the daily dog walkers and passersby.

Designs are by former Babe Ruth player Wesley Velasquez and ERHS graduate Maerielle Batugo.

New paint adorns the structures surrounding Braden Field.

reality,” said Co-op Board President Bill Jones.

Power Proceeds

The solar installation is expected to produce 264,000 kilowatt hours of power each year – enough renewable electricity to power 32 typical single-family homes. This avoids 187 metric tons of carbon pollution (from 200,000 tons of burned coal) annually.

Co-op expects the array to reduce the store's yearly electricity bill by $35,000. The system should pay for itself and the new roof it sits on well inside the anticipated 25-year lifespan of both – with the remaining years of savings creating a head start on its replacement.

Co-op remains connected to Pepco for the remainder of the building's annual power needs.

Getting It Built

The solar installation was engineered and built by Frederick-based Sustainable Energy Systems in the Fall of 2020 and consists of 604 Axitec 400-watt solar panels covering approximately 20,000 square feet of the building's roof. Construction of the roof by Adelphia Contracting started in late 2019 and the solar array installation kicked off in September 2020.

Funding came from Co-op members who initially loaned the store $350,000 and donated $50,000. A $350,000 grant from the Maryland Consolidated Capital Bond Loan program capped the successful Rays on the Roof campaign. “We are incredibly grateful to Maryland State Senator Paul Pinsky, who sponsored our grant request, and the rest of the District 22 team who gave their full support to this community-based and environmentally responsible project,” said Rays on the Roof Committee member Dorrie Bates.

Kicking Off

The concept of the Greenbelt Co-op converting to solar first came up when the store was in imminent need of a new roof and resources were short. In a brain-storming session on likely sources of grant funding, the Co-op board and its grant-writing volunteers realized that adding a roof-top solar energy project would increase the appeal of the proposal to the state, attract support from environmentally conscious residents and offset the cost of both the roof and the solar array.

The Co-op team developed a cost-benefit analysis to underpin the value proposition and the result was the Rays on the Roof project that inspired loans and donations from Co-op members – and a proposal to the Maryland State Legislature that checked all the renewable energy and community revitalization boxes.

For more information, go to greenbelt.coop or email Kurt@SustainableEnergySystems.net. # Greenbelt Artists Keep Working Through Many-month Lockdown

by Matthew Arbach

In spite of the pandemic, Greenbelt artists are pressing on, undaunted both in the development of their own art and the dissemination of their craft to others, recognizing that making art can also promote feelings of well-being, healing, relaxation and restoration.

Judy Goldberg-Strassler

Ceramist Judy Goldberg-Strassler, in addition to her studio production, teaches ceramic arts courses at the Community Center, currently run as Zoom classes. She asserts that clay is the definition of fun, filled with infinite possibilities. Goldberg-Strassler creates functional ceramics for daily use and explores the sculptural aspects of clay. She creates functional ceramics through wood firing and especially through complicated crystalline firing. She calls her work Shalom Pottery, because shalom is a word that means many things, including love, well-being, integrity, perfection, harmony and peace.

“Shalom is how I feel while working with clay. I am calm, focused and filled with well-being in the world of clay. I am thrilled that I can share this with all of my students.” Goldberg-Strassler, a Greenbelt resident since 1977 and with a ceramic arts certificate in 2019 from Hood College, lauds Greenbelt Recreation for their outside-the-box thinking and problem-solving in their continuing efforts to bring the arts to the city.

Ingrid Cowan Hass

Puppeteer, painter and print-maker Ingrid Cowan Hass and her puppeteer husband Ole, residents of Greenbelt for 23 years, own and operate Beech Tree Puppets, which has produced many lively performances in Greenbelt. When a spring performance at the Community Center was cancelled, a filmed version and live Zoom interview was created instead, which attracted over 200 viewers, including some from other states and two different countries.

“[We] experienced the tremendous support and connection through the screen as we heard from all these people. The show really touched them and we were uplifted to keep going.” By providing outdoor classes, participating children became engrossed in the process and fulfilled a long-desired opportunity to connect with others. Cowan Hass reflected that “It was beautiful and I was again reminded how healing the arts can be.”

Barbara Joann Combs

Artist Barbara Joann Combs is a Prince George’s County art educator and a community arts facilitator with pre-K through high school students. Combs recently led a Zoom workshop for Greenbelt Recreation Arts, celebrating Black History Month by guiding students in making paper quilts inspired by abstract, brightly colored African American quilts.

For Combs, “abstraction, jazz, nature and portraiture are the subjects that move me” and the main elements that appear in her own work, which include paintings, drawings, prints and found-object sculptures. She works primarily from her home studio, which she views during the pandemic as an “opportunity to reflect on my goals, create art, get closer to family, develop some friendships and relax.”

Tom Baker

Tom Baker, Greenbelt artist in residence emeritus, is a painter, sculptor and wood carver. His most recent works, still in progress, are inspired by the natural world he has encountered on hikes in the Appalachian Mountains with his wife. “Getting away from the political and social chaos and into nature is restorative for me,” says Baker. “It becomes a walking meditation of gratitude. This allows me to respond to current divisions in our country, rather than react to them.”

A Greenbelt resident for 29 years, Baker maintains that the love and practice of art and the desire to serve has led him to be a teacher for 45 years. His students have included deaf children, Vietnamese refugees in Thailand, homeless men, Gonzaga High School students, children in D.C. and students at the Greenbelt Community Center. “I am waiting to teach again when we can get back to the center physically” – a sentiment that the entire Greenbelt community no doubt also eagerly embraces.
